

False Imprisonment

The following four key elements must exist to if someone is to succeed in an action for false imprisonment:

- The conduct of the person who causes confinement is intentional; the confinement is total
- and without an escape route; The detainee shield without his or her consent. The detainee's compliance is involuntary and contrary to his or her will; and The detainer's conduct is unlawful or unauthorized.