

Module 3

CONTROL PANEL OR ANNUNCIATOR

- This is the central part that receives messages and translates the information into a response. Most control panels contain the same type of hardware.
- Control panels are the “brains” of an electronic security system. A control panel receives the messages, warnings and alerts provided by the sensing hardware, and translate this information into a response.