

Identification, symbols and the authority of licenses

- No person who holds a licence to engage in the business of selling the services of private investigators or security guards shall do so unless the licence is displayed in a conspicuous spot in the office at which the public is invited to deal. Every licence is the property of the Crown and a person shall immediately return his, her or its licence to the Registrar in the following circumstances:

.