

1.3 Security Guarding:

Module 1

Types of Assignments

- 1. Fixed post: The fixed post is referred to a stationary post that is located at a specific location for a specific time period. Security guards assigned to a fixed post must not leave their post for any reason unless revealed by a followed security guard. For example: a lobby guard, a bank guard or a guard assigned to a excess control point operations centre.
- 2. Patrol post: Security guard assigned to patrol posts is primarily required to conduct continuous patrol of the designated premises and/or respond to calls for assistance. For example: a guard patrolling each floor of a commercial building.
- 3. Vehicle patrol: Vehicle patrol guards are expected to patrol areas that are too great to be covered on foot within a limited time. The patrolling vehicle consists of equipped radio or mobile telephone so that the guard is in constant communication with the dispatcher.
- 4. Roving patrol: Security personal assigned to roving patrol are more flexibility when covering a large area since they may be on foot, on bicycles, or in a vehicle.
