

Consequences

All Guards must be aware that their actions have consequences. They are given the authority to enforce the laws and rules of and on and must never be motivated by any other factor than the administration of the law. There are many consequences to such actions if they are exhibited by the Guard, including:

- Criminal Charges—In cases where the Guard inappropriately directs legal actions against another person or commits an offence motivated by racial and cultural factors, they are culpable under the appropriate sections of the Criminal Code of Canada.
